

Library Visit 11/21/2024

Today during my library visit, I am going to explore the biographic information on Paul Scheel, to see if there is a general biography summary, look up any books on World-Cat, and plug those libraries into Google Scholar. I am mainly concerned in foreign academic libraries.

Banked Blood: A Study in Blood Preservation

To begin my search regarding Paul Scheel I looked into Charles Richard Drew dissertation, I have found the following information regarding the history of transfusions.

- 1) Before Harvey which may be called itself the period of infancy
- 2) Between the publication of Harvey's monograph and Landsteiner's original paper which maybe the adolescent period of it development.
- 3) Since Landsteiner's paper in 1900, it is considered the period of maturity.

According to the same dissertation, it states that Paul Scheel to arrive the practice of blood transfusion in 1802, putting him in the second period, also known as the period of development.

Google

To identify some potential libraries to link to my Google Scholar search, I searched medical libraries in England since 19th century England. The two main libraries that come up are:

- 1) UK Medical Heritage Library

2) Royal College of Surgeons

Google Scholar

Since the two libraries I have found in my Google search aren't able to be linked, I am unable to find citations using those libraries.
